Note. A briefer version is generally at the same level or a level or so lower in difficulty than its corresponding full-length text. However, we strongly recommend that you personally review any briefer texts in which you are interested to ensure the level is appropriate for your students.

^aThe textbooks are listed by the first author's surname; an ampersand indicates one or more additional authors.

^bDoes not include front matter (e.g., preface, notes to instructor, notes to students, visuals), blank pages, or back matter (e.g., appendices, glossaries, indices, references, photo credits, answer keys).

^cThe Coon, Feldman, Huffman, and Myers texts are now available in modular formats. Texts use the same topical organization as their full-length versions to create smaller modular units. The Huffman text offers an optional chapter on Industrial/Organizational Psychology.

^dIncludes female first author.

^eThe Wood et al. textbook includes a built-in study guide. These 62 pages were included in calculating Text pages and Text pages plus back matter but were excluded in calculating pages per chapter. The Coon text includes 11 preview pages of study recommendations. These pages were included in calculating Text pages and Text pages plus back matter but were excluded in calculating pages per chapter.
